Third Module

Instructions for workshop activities.

The aim of the third module workshop activities is to learn how to explore the city as a process, and in particular large urban transformations as the complex interplay between actors, with different identities, interests, resources.

The objects of the third module workshop activities are: processes of urban transformations happened in the city of Milan in the last ten-fifteen years.

Students will develop the third module workshop's activities in small groups, each one focusing its attention upon a specific urban transformation process.

These are three main families of analytical questions:

- 1.1 When did the process took place and where?
- 1.2 Which have been the most relevant steps in the process?
- 2.1 Who are the actors involved? What role did they play? With which resources? What interests at stake?
- 2.2 What kind of interactions have happened between them? Collaboration, conflicts, negotiations?
- 3.1 What have been the premises and outcomes of the process?
- 3.2 What was the definition of the "problem"- scope of the project- at the beginning?
- 3.3 Did the project change during the process?

In order to address these three different families of questions, groups will develop:

- a. Chronological map of the process press review
- b. Actors' map press review and documents review
- c. Critical assessment, comparing premises and outcomes
