FIRST SECTION: THE SHAPE OF URBAN TRANSFORMATIONS

Key words: composition, urban design, morphology, typology

The first section of the course/workshop focuses on the different ways in which urban transformations have been built. From the 1980's first transformations up to todays' most recent and contemporary project, this section will understand how urban regeneration can change the aspect and the image of the city. A very relevant part of this section will be dedicated to urban design and how urban design techniques can help the success of a urban project

SECOND SECTION: THE ROLE OF URBAN TRANSFORMATIONS

Key words: regional planning, large scale, geography, post suburbanisation, networks

The second section of the workshop aims at understanding how urban regeration processes are no longer a city's affair but they became since decades a regional aspect of the growing relations between city and regions. The course will understand how to consider a urban project in terms of its position, its role, its being or not being strategic in the metropolitan assets. Understanding the position and the role of a transformation means being able to decide its used, its weight and its balance between public and private

Key words: urban planning techniques, land use, zoning, building code, rules

The third section of the workshop focuses on the way in which a master plan for a urban transformation should be done. According to Marco Facchinetty Spanning method and respecting Milanis School tradition and history, students will learn how to compose and design a master plan, and how using it as an implementation tool. Marco Facchine to the state plan is considered by this approach as the main urban planning device to manage, design, create urban transformations.

FOURTH SECTION: GOVERNANCE AND MANAGEMENT OF URBAN TRANSFORMATIONS

Key words: gorvenance, urban policies, private public partnerships

The last section of the workshop aims at understanding how management could influence on masterplans layout and organisation. The first and most important thing behind a planned transformation is that it should be realized and built up. Governance and policies can help the development of the project, the control over its impacts, the building of the consensus needed and all the implementation policies to help the project survive the time.
